

Barry
Egan

email: began@independent.ie

14 LIVING

Caprice eyes up Niall in her quest for Mr Right

IT'S official. Caprice is single and looking for love.

How do I know this? Because she told me in Bellinter House on Thursday night. She is determined to settle down and have children with Mr Right. That one of the most gorgeous women in the world would be looking for true love is hardly a surprise. (Maybe she could find Mr Right for her beautiful blonde friend Tara Sinnott, who just can't seem to hold on to a man.)

Irish fashion icon Ian Galvin got something of a surprise, however, when he walked into Jay Bourke's boutique hotel on Thursday evening and saw that the American supermodel – and his fellow judge on TV3's Style Wars – was wearing his range of clothing, Bastyan.

The pair immediately bonded – so much so that he got into his old Jag and drove all the way from Navan into town where he picked out a selection of Bastyan dresses from

STYLE: Fashion icon Ian Galvin

Brown Thomas for Caprice to wear on the show: they began filming that day.

While Ian was en route on his mission of fashion mercy (he was also picking up his dog Boo Boo), Caprice told your diarist that she thinks Irish popstar Niall Breslin is "absolutely gorgeous".

Upon his return, Galvin told all and sundry that he would be throwing a special dinner at his house in Tramore when Style Wars wraps in early July. Can I sit beside Caprice?

LOOKING FOR LOVE: Single-again Caprice says popstar Niall Breslin is 'absolutely gorgeous'